

THE POWER OF HUMAN TOUCH

SEB'S PROJECTS INDIA ANNUAL REPORT
2024 - 2025

A note from Trustees of the Sebastian Hunter Memorial Trust UK

As we enter the 24th year since Seb's death and the building of our very first small school in Senji Mottur, we have been reflecting on the extraordinary difference that the human touch makes. In every corner of our work in India, it is the people - their kindness, care, and determination - that bring real change to life.

During our visit at the end of 2023, we were moved by the dedication of the teachers, whose daily encouragement, patience, and belief in their students light a spark that lasts a lifetime. Their work is not just about lessons and exams - it's about giving each child the confidence to dream.

We also met with a group of higher education students whose journeys are proof of what can happen when someone reaches out a hand to help. Many are first-generation learners, stepping into a world of possibilities their parents could never have imagined. Each one spoke with heartfelt gratitude for the opportunity to study - an opportunity made possible only through the generosity and support of the Seb's community.

Every donation, every hour volunteered, every event organized - these are all acts of human touch. They connect us, across miles and cultures, in a shared belief that compassion can transform lives. We are deeply grateful to everyone who has given their time, energy, and heart this year. Particular thanks must go to the incredible team in India who make this all possible. You are all a testament to the power of humanity to make a difference to so many lives. We are so grateful for all you do in Seb's honour.

With thanks and warm wishes,
Anna, Laura, James and Adam

Director's Note:

Why Human Touch Still Matters

The world today is moving fast. Technology is advancing, everything is becoming more digital, and often it feels like we're all just trying to keep pace. But in the midst of all this change, one thing remains the same: people still need people.

At Seb's Projects, we've never forgotten that truth. Our work is not only about programs or targets; it's about people and the connections that change lives; A simple conversation that lifts someone's spirit. A look that says, "I believe in you." A hand that reaches out at the right time. For us at Seb's, "Human Touch" isn't a phrase - it's the very heart of what we do.

On the cover of this report, we chose to honor the story of Settaiammal, a tribal woman with a big dream for her community. She wanted children in her remote village and nearby areas to have easy access to education. In an extraordinary act of generosity, she gave up the only piece of land she owned so that a Seb's School could be built. Today, her gift is a beacon of hope for the children of Pattikollai and neighboring villages. Her story reminds us of the power of one individual, the true power of human touch.

Over the years, I have witnessed this power in many places - in tribal girls walking miles each day just to reach school, in the pure joy on the face of a homeless child finally given a chance to learn, in a young health worker patiently and tenderly caring for expectant mothers in distress, in mothers who turned their small kitchens into thriving businesses, and in tribal women standing tall as confident entrepreneurs. These aren't just stories to make us feel good. They are living proof that compassion, connection, and care can transform lives.

This year has never been just about projects or numbers. It has been about people, about lives touched, hopes restored, and communities strengthened. I am deeply grateful to the State and District Education officials and to our corporate partner, Corporater, along with their teams, who visited our programs and connected with our communities. Their encouragement and presence continue to inspire us.

As you read this report, I hope you catch a glimpse of this spirit, the beauty of what happens when hearts meet purpose, and when people lift each other up. That is where true impact begins. With your continued support, we will keep walking alongside communities, building not just schools or projects, but something lasting, meaningful, and filled with hope.

Emma Koshi

Director
Seb's Projects India

From brightly lit spaces to a nurturing atmosphere, everything about Seb's Schools say : YOU BELONG HERE. YOU MATTER

Seb's Projects continued its quiet yet powerful journey through the hills, running nine schools that have reached the hearts and minds of over 525 children. Seb's Schools are not only a place for instruction; they have become a space of care, consistency, and growth.

This year marked a quiet transformation across our education program. Classrooms grew fuller not just in numbers, but in spirit. Children came eagerly, day after day, and attendance improved not by enforcement, but by the simple joy of being in a place where they felt valued.

Our Seb's School teachers gave more than just lessons. They offered their presence, their patience, and their deep belief in every child's potential. With regular training, they embraced new and child-friendly teaching methods that made learning joyful and accessible. Their commitment extended beyond the classroom, ensuring that all government requirements, from documentation to learning outcomes, were met with dedication and precision. Under the guidance of a dedicated educational supervisor, Seb's teachers steadily transformed their schools, raising them to new levels of excellence and care.

Every visit from the District Education Department brought words of appreciation for the dedication of the teachers, the remarkable reading and writing abilities of the children, and the learning environment created even in the remotest corners of the hills. Officials began to take notice not just of the numbers, but of the enthusiasm they saw in children to learn, the sense of something genuine happening at Seb's schools.

Sharing a post by Giridharan, a board member and supporter of Seb's Projects, which best describes our education program.

In the heart of the tribal communities, a young girl's journey is full of hope and transformation. As a child, her world was simple—playing in the fields, learning from nature, and living close to her family and traditions. The uniform she wore symbolized not just her transition but also her commitment to learning. Her small hands, once used to carrying firewood, now gripped pencils and books, ready to write her own future. Her transformation is not just about academics. It's about empowerment. As she sat in the classroom, surrounded by children from different backgrounds, she realized that education was not just a privilege—it was her right. She is no longer just a tribal girl; she is a student, a dreamer, and soon, a change-maker.

Here in the Jawadhi Hills, Seb's School became more than an education project. It became a name spoken with warmth, because behind every classroom door was a story of a child who was seen, encouraged, and believed in.

Library Reading Movement

As part of the Vaasippu Iyakkam (Reading Movement) initiated by the Tamil Nadu Government, colorful storybooks found their way into the hands of eager young readers in Seb's Schools. For many children, it was a doorway to imagination and new words. Children enjoyed reading books to the visitors who came to school and started sharing stories with friends and families. With every page turned, children are not just learning to read—they are discovering the world, one story at a time. This small step is nurturing a lifelong habit that will light the path of their learning journey.

Village Education Committee

A steady shift from obligation to ownership, from passive presence to active engagement.

VECs brought together parents, teachers, and local leaders, creating a space where concerns could be heard, decisions made together, and every child's learning was seen as a collective responsibility. Their involvement led to increased school strength, helped reduce seasonal migration, and made education more stable and meaningful for many children.

Parents began visiting schools regularly, not just to drop off their children, but to engage in meaningful conversations, offer lunch, celebrate moments, participate in events, and contribute their time to advocate with the government for their community development initiatives. These simple yet powerful gestures showed that education, along with community development, were no longer distant, but something they could shape with their own hands and hearts.

A dream rooted in love

Venkatesan, a humble resident of Pulliyamarthur village, turned inspiration into action. Touched by the joy of learning he had seen in a Seb's School in the Jawadhi Hills, he dreamt the same for his own village children. With quiet determination, he reached out and rallied support from Seb's Projects coordinators. With this act of love and leadership, community care, and a deep desire to see his village children thriving, he generously donated his own land so that a school could be built.

Thanks to Corporater in making this dream a reality by building a Seb's School. Pulliyamarthur children now have a place to gather, to learn, to laugh, and to grow. Seb's Projects hopes that this legacy will live on in every child who walks through the doors of Pulliyamarthur School with a book in their hand and a dream in their heart.

Celebrating the inauguration of Seb's School built in partnership with Corporater

In the quiet tribal village of Pulliyamarthur, where education once meant walking 7 kilometers through rocky terrain, a new chapter has begun, not just with walls and classrooms, but with hope, dignity, and deep human connection. The newly constructed Seb's School at Pulliyamarthur village, along with a clean drinking water facility, stands as tribute to what care and compassion can do. Thoughtful touches are woven into every corner, with well-ventilated, child-friendly classrooms designed to make learning joyful and interactive for 40 eager young minds. The inauguration of the school was a moment of pride and celebration, graced by Jan and Inger Vasshus from Norway and Madavan and the team from Corporater Chennai. Today, the school stands not only as a building of bricks and cement, but as a home of trust, warmth, and belonging built through a chain of hands and hearts bonded by compassion.

Balwadi : learning begins with love

Seb's Balwadi Centers are safe, joyful spaces where 3 to 5-year-old children begin their learning journey through songs, stories, and play. This year, 36 children transitioned confidently from Balwadi to first standard. With every story told and song sung, our teachers nurtured confidence, curiosity, and belonging, ensuring school feels like a place where they are truly welcome.

A celebration of learning with Seb's Projects India in the Jawadhi Hills

It was a joyous occasion in the Jawadhi Hills as nearly 400 children and 200 community people from nine Seb's NRSTC primary schools, representing more than 20 villages, gathered in the village of Pattikolai to celebrate their Annual Day. The Seb's Annual Day was a vibrant celebration, showcasing the remarkable talents of the students through skits, dances, songs, and a variety of class projects. Interactive displays demonstrated how children are learning subjects like math and science in creative and engaging ways.

A special highlight of the day was the graduation of 39 students from Grade 5, marking the completion of their primary schooling. Each graduate received a personalized certificate and proudly wore a handmade graduation cap. The hope is that these students will continue their education in government middle schools across the district and serve as shining examples to younger children in their villages, inspiring them to dream big.

The chief guest of the day was Dr Sandhya Pentareddy, Executive Director of the Vellore Institute of Technology (VIT) and a strong advocate for education. In her words, 'It was heart-warming to see such great schools in such remote places. Seb's Projects has done a great thing in igniting the sparks in these children. There is a very strong foundation and I think they will do wonders as they go on in life.'

The celebration was further honored by the presence of Seb's Projects Chairperson Dr. Neema Varghese and the District Education Officers, who encouraged the students and emphasized to both children and parents the vital importance of continuing education for a brighter future.

A journey of discovery : Grade 5 students explore the world beyond the hills

For all of our Grade 5 students from Seb's School, this educational tour was not just a trip - it was their first journey out of the hills into the vast plains and the busy city. As the bus wound down the mountain roads and entered the plains, the children watched, with awe, the changing landscapes, tall buildings, speeding vehicles, and city sounds. Laughter and songs filled the bus as they shared this unique experience with friends and teachers.

Their first stop was Vandalur Zoological Park in Chennai, where nature came alive through close encounters with animals and birds they had only seen in books. It was a rare moment of connection with the natural world, awakening curiosity, respect, and joy.

From nature to history, they stepped into the ancient wonders of Mahabalipuram, walking through rock-cut temples, stone carvings and sculptures, and listening to stories of kings. Some touched the carvings gently, trying to feel the history with their small hands.

And then came a moment many had dreamt of the Marina Beach. For children who had only seen hills and forests, the vastness of the sea brought a mix of joy, surprise, and awe. They ran, laughed, collected seashells, held hands and stood facing the waves, feeling the ocean breeze against their cheeks for the first time.

Teachers watched with quiet pride as children stepped into the unknown with courage, curiosity, and laughter. This trip was a journey of the senses and the soul, where children learned not only about wildlife, history, and geography, but also discovered the joy of travel, the power of friendship, and the beauty of the world beyond their village. It awakened dreams and gave them stories they will carry for life.

NUTRITION

Cooked and served with love and care by the community

SDG 2

Seb's Projects believes that true transformation begins with compassion in action, and that the human touch goes beyond just providing nutrition. This touch reached over 525 children across our nine schools and Balwadis, where each child received a hot, nutritious meal lovingly prepared within their community.

These meals were rich in grains, pulses, vegetables, and eggs, and were a daily reminder that Seb's Projects is looking out for the wellbeing of these children. The results are seen when classrooms are filled with children with brighter smiles, improved concentration, better health, and greater eagerness to attend school every day. This essence of the human touch has nourished not just the body, but the spirit and mind, building the foundation for a better future.

HEALTH

The human touch that heals through care

3 GOOD HEALTH AND WELL-BEING

SDG 3

Throughout the year, healthcare remained a core part of our activities, not just as a service, but as a gesture of care and wellbeing. From screenings to awareness programs, the health work we carried out was rooted in human connection—listening, responding, and being present for children and their families when they needed it most.

Mother and child care

One of our major commitments was to improve maternal and child health in our tribal communities. We have taken a proactive step in identifying pregnant women in the villages, visiting their homes, assisting them with hospital registration for antenatal care, along with transportation arrangements. In communities where maternal health is often a silent struggle, Seb's Projects brought presence and dignity, proving that sometimes the most powerful medicine is simply knowing you are not alone.

Inspiration in Action Award

Seb's Projects proudly honoured health worker Thirumala with the "Inspiration in Action Award" for her exceptional courage and service in the face of a critical medical emergency.

During a late-night emergency call, Thirumala responded swiftly to a pregnant woman in labor in Chinnaetipattu village by calling an ambulance. With no time to reach the hospital from the hills, she remained calm and focused inside the ambulance, under minimal lighting and challenging conditions. With compassion and presence of mind, she successfully assisted in the safe delivery of a baby, ensuring the well-being of both mother and child.

This heroic act reflects not only medical competence but also the deep commitment to life, community, and service that Seb's Projects stands for. Her dedication turned a potentially life-threatening situation into a moment of new life and hope.

The "Inspiration in Action Award" celebrates individuals who rise beyond the call of duty and lead by example and Thirumala truly embodies that spirit.

Leprosy campaign

As part of the government's ongoing efforts to eliminate leprosy and encourage early detection, a Leprosy Screening Program was conducted at Seb's Schools by the local Primary Health Centre.

Mobile medical unit

Understanding the difficulties many tribal families face in accessing distant hospitals, Monthly Mobile Medical Camps were organized in coordination with CMC and the Government Health Department for elderly people, women, and children in the community. These camps were more than check-ups—they became spaces of healing and reassurance, where people could speak freely, be heard, and receive care without fear or formality.

Training

Adding to their ability to serve with care, our health workers participated in a special training program organized by the government in the state capital in Chennai. The focus was on balanced nutrition and hygiene practices, equipping them with both the knowledge and the sensitivity needed to bring these lessons home—into conversations, kitchens, and everyday choices.

Vaccination

We are also proud to share the successful completion of the Polio Vaccination Drive across all the villages where we work. Behind the smooth coordination were health workers who walked long distances, explained the importance of immunization to hesitant parents, and ensured no child was missed. Their commitment, grounded in community relationships, turned a routine drive into an act of prevention and protection.

Adolescent health

As part of our continued efforts to support the health and well-being of adolescent girls in our communities, our health workers collected sanitary napkins from the government and distributed them to adolescent girls. They also conducted awareness sessions during the distribution to educate the girls on proper menstrual hygiene practices, disposal methods, and the importance of maintaining health during menstruation.

Clean and safe drinking water

Throughout the year, all Seb's School children and their communities had continuous access to safe, clean drinking water, thanks to the consistent efforts of our health workers visiting regularly to clean and check the water filters, ensuring that every sip a child took was safe.

Seb's Projects worked closely with TATA Swach, for technical guidance.

Seb's Health workers have shown what it means to care for a community's wellbeing in the most practical and personal way. Their hands not only cleaned filters, but protected health, prevented sickness, and ensured that no one fell ill.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Nurturing Dreams, Changing Futures

At Seb's Projects, tribal children who graduate from our schools and the many underprivileged children from around Vellore continue to receive our support and mentorship as they move into secondary school, college, and beyond. Through our scholarship program, we ensure that the spark of education is never dimmed by financial hardship.

Last year, we had the privilege of supporting 35 students as they pursued higher education in a variety of courses. Each one of them worked hard, overcame challenges, and passed their exams, moving forward to the next stage of their studies.

Divyakala, Kalivani, Thirumagal, Vasugi have even completed their nursing courses, stepped into the workforce, and now proudly support their families, a dream come true for parents who once wondered if such a future was possible.

This success is not the achievement of individuals alone - it is a collective triumph. It belongs to the families who stood by them with love and encouragement, to the teachers who guided them with patience and care, and to every supporter who believed in their potential.

As our scholarship students step into the next stage of their journeys, we celebrate their success. We know that when we invest in a child's education, we are not just shaping one life - we are transforming generations.

LIVELIHOOD

Impact of Focus Business School Training

8 DECENT WORK AND ECONOMIC GROWTH

SDG 8

The Focus Business School training was conducted for the Thandayankottai Women Self-Help Group with the goal of enhancing their entrepreneurial skills and strengthening their income-generating activities. Through the training, the women learned to work collectively, organize themselves as a team, have a business plan and work towards it, and maintain proper accounts.

It was an empowering experience for the women in Thandayankottai to understand and take control of the business for the first time from the procurement of tamarind, to streamline the cleaning and packing process, to marketing and sales.

It's heartening to see men in the community find new livelihood opportunities by farming sugarcane and processing sugar.

This initiative is an example of how the Focus Business School training transformed community-based enterprises into sustainable and empowering livelihood models.

Each of them has earned Rs.20,000 for this season.

Jayasudha's Story: From Homemaker to Goat-Rearing Entrepreneur

Jayasudha, a homemaker whose husband works as a wage laborer, was determined to contribute to her family's income. After attending the Focus Business School training, she expressed a strong interest in starting a small business of her own. The training gave her the confidence and knowledge to explore viable livelihood options.

With the support of Jan and IngerVasshus, Jayasudha was able to purchase a pair of goats to begin goat rearing—a sustainable income-generating activity in her community. With proper care and feeding, this pair of goats can produce two kids, gradually increasing the size of her goat stock.

This not only opens a reliable income stream but also gives her the opportunity to build a small-scale business that supports her family in the long run.

Corporater Visit

The highlight was the inauguration of the Pulliyamarthur Seb's School, built by Corporater, which was officially inaugurated by Jan and Inger Vasshus. This was followed a traditional tribal food festival, cultural show.

Seb's Projects was very blessed this year to have several members of the Corporater team - Uwa and Heidi, Eric and Aurora from Norway, Nikki Hollinrake from the UK, and Madavan and the team from Chennai - who visited Seb's Projects tribal development initiatives in the remote villages of the Jawadhi Hills.

At the Thandayankottai village, our Corporater team interacted with the Women's Self-Help group to know about their learning experience from Focus Business School Training.

The visit extended to Seb's Feeding Program in Vellore, where they participated in distributing food packets to people living on the streets and CMC Chatram.

One of the most impactful moments of the visit was the interaction with the Gypsy community, a marginalized group often excluded from mainstream society. Donors met children who, with the support of Seb's team, had been enrolled in school for the first time. Seeing the transformation in these children from street life to school benches left a lasting impression.

The visit strengthened the partnership between Corporater, and the communities they support. It provided a deeper understanding of the needs, challenges, and remarkable progress made through Seb's Projects.

Seb's Projects extends heartfelt thanks to Corporater for walking alongside the tribal communities in their journey toward transformation.

Our outreach program

Breakfast at Chatram for CMC patients

A hot breakfast is served to about 80 patients who are terminally ill living in Chatram. This has been an ongoing program for the last six years.

Our journey with street children

Their hands, once stretched out for begging, now stretch toward knowledge. Once asking for coins, they are now asking questions in class. This is not just a change in posture; it's a change in destiny. Let's give every child the right to learn, not to beg. Let's put books in their hands and hope in their hearts.

These families living on the street pavements are also provided with monthly dry rations and protective roof covers.

VOICE OF THE DONORS

You have instilled in me a renewed sense of purpose.

Madhavan Gopalarathnam,
Director Enterprise Solutions Corporater.

My Visit to Seb's Projects – A Personal Reflection
My experience with Seb's Projects was truly eye-opening.

I've always believed in action over words, and I saw this belief come alive during my recent visit to the Jawadhi Hills - thanks to my employer, Corporater A.S.

I had the privilege of visiting Pulliyamarathur, a village in Vellore, Tamil Nadu, along with Ms. Enger and Mr. Jan Vasshus, the parents of our CEO. We were there to witness the inauguration of a primary school built by Corporater. While the natural beauty of the Jawadhi Hills was breathtaking, it was the deeper beauty of purposeful human effort that truly moved me.

What struck me most was the passion and commitment of the Seb's Projects staff - the way they engaged with the children and the community and responded to their needs with dignity and care. This is a region where basic facilities are still a challenge, and sustainable living remains difficult. Yet amidst the festivities and the joyful performances by the children, the happiness on their faces was unmistakable and deeply touching.

I was especially humbled by the sense of community from the tribal school teachers to the volunteers and project staff. Their collective passion and commitment left a lasting impression on me. It reminded me that humanity, in its most genuine form, is beautiful and worth celebrating.

I extend my heartfelt thanks to Seb's Projects, for their unwavering dedication to enabling education for every child.

In the words of Charlie Hollinrake from Corporater following his mother Nikki Hollinrake's visit to Seb's Projects.

My mum, driven by her passion for giving back, recently travelled to India to volunteer directly with Seb's Projects, an amazing initiative providing vital support in local communities.

Corporater is proud to get behind Seb's Projects, and it's brilliant to see that commitment in action. My mum joined our colleagues to India, sharing meals, connecting with people and truly experiencing the impact firsthand.

Seeing the difference the project makes on the ground clearly had a profound effect. So much so, it sparked an idea for her next challenge. A charity skydive - specifically to raise funds for Seb's Projects. Dedicating time to a chosen Project like Seb's for me that is really living the values of "Life, Light and Increase" so often spoken about by Tor Inge Vashuss our founder.

Reflections from Charles Armstrong

Having just spent a week touring the Seb Project schools around Vellore with my son, our aim was to better understand the huge impact this charity is having on the lives of so many children. Importantly, the meaningful change being created is not the work of one individual - rather the collective strength of the board of directors, donors, volunteers, teachers and the communities involved. What was fascinating to see was how this collaboration has created an eco-system of its own, at the heart of which lies this simple belief that every individual deserves the opportunity to live with dignity, purpose and hope. It became abundantly clear to me, that the value of education is a true gift and is the key to building a brighter future not only for the individual but also for their local community.

On the plane home, I reflected on the week that had just passed and realised how it had impacted me too. The opportunity of bringing joy to a child and showing them compassion is not only contagious but an essential part of human connection.

Gratitude is the secret to happiness and the children being educated at Seb's projects showed me that despite being less fortunate, their lives were still rich and joyful. A lesson we would be wise to not forget.

I am Ignatius from Corporater India.

I just wanted to share with you an experience I had visiting Seb's Projects in Jawadhi Hills. This was part of the Corporater CSR Activity. So we mustered up what we could collect from friends and family.

We got some really good books for the kids, to set up a small library. We also got them some sports equipment.

It was an exciting and heart warming experience, But most of all, it was also very humbling for all of us. From the moment we reached it was just warm smiles, and children welcoming us with flowers.. What little that is being done is such a whole big world for these kids. All these kids were so enthusiastic to show what knowledge they had gained. What I got from this first contact with the community was that Seb's Projects isn't just about resources - it's about building a caring community that nurtures growth and mutual support.

It truly was, because we saw how these teachers had to travel from far away, and how these kids had to travel treacherous paths just to get to this school. It was a couple of kilometers away from their homes. And it was, mostly just forest.

I feel incredibly honored and privileged, that I was able to be a part of this. And this visit reminded me that even small contributions can make a big difference to these communities. I'd like to thank Tor Inge, for the support that he is giving to these communities and for this experience. I'd like to just end this by saying, thank you for letting us be a part of something so meaningful.

VISITORS

Humanitarian Clowns Abroad, an Australia-based organization led by Director Tim Webster, recently brought a team of 24 international volunteers to the Paediatric Department as part of their ongoing mission to spread joy and compassion. This visit, coordinated in partnership with Seb's Projects India, marks their fifth trip to India.

During their time in the hospital, the clowns created an atmosphere of warmth and happiness in the Paediatric, Rehabilitation, and Mental Health departments. Through simple yet impactful acts of fun, play, and heartfelt engagement, the clowns' lively performances brought smiles and lifted the spirits of children, families, and staff alike, offering a welcome reprieve during challenging times.
